FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Marketplace Books Launches “Classics” Series

Marketplace Books, a world-renowned publisher of books and electronic products, announced today the launch of its “Classics” Series—new prints of some of the most important trading books of the early twentieth century.

Marketplace Books has focused on producing the “Classics” series in order to give serious investors a way to build their reference libraries and to learn from some of the most important figures in trading, in their exact words.

Says John Boyer, Vice-President and Head of Operations, “The ‘Classics’ series is your key to a treasure trove of time-tested strategies, pivotal market events, and insights into the minds that shaped trading history.”

The first of the series, The Point & Figure Method by Victor de Villiers and Taylor Owen, details one of the most useful techniques of the past decades for successfully forecasting market prices and determining what action should be taken. Other titles in the series include: Humphrey Neill’s Tape Reading & Market Tactics, Napoleon Hill’s Think & Grow Rich, and Philip L. Carret’s The Art of Speculation.

Based in Columbia, Maryland, Marketplace Books has been serving the needs of investors, financial advisors, and professional traders since 1995, often partnering with key industry players in the investment world.
